October's Theme: The Haunted Studio

Students beware! Enter the studio this month at your own risk. The ghosts of some famous 19th Century composers are lurking around the music room waiting to unleash their musical madness on unsuspecting boys and ghouls. Are you brave enough to tackle the terror that awaits you?

To tickle your funny bone...

A music scholar was touring through a graveyard in Vienna when he heard music coming out of a grave. On inspection, he found the headstone as Ludwig van Beethoven, 1770-1827. The music was the Ninth Symphony being played backwards. He soon rang up a friend who came in time to hear the Seventh Symphony being played backwards. They hurried to call an expert who hurried to them to hear the Fifth Symphony playing backwards. All the more weird was the fact that symphonies were being played in the reverse order in which they were composed. When the caretaker of the graveyard heard this, the only comment he made was, "What's the wonder! He's just decomposing!"
